

The Do Not Call List is probably THE one thing the FCC has gotten right in the past four years. Not that it was your idea. Weakening this widely popular consumer protection provision would confirm your total sell out to industry and the abdication of your congressionally defined charge. Please do not disgust us further.